By using redirects, there is a possibility that they will error out if a resource has been moved or deleted. When this occurs, I need to update the redirect to point to the new location. If I fail to get the redirects updated on my site in a timely manner, I've provided this document to show where they originally redirected to and some information from the source site if the reader needs to track it down. Also, I only cover the unique URLs for the document as a whole. Once the redirect is listed here, I do not list again even if the URL is repeated later in the book.

Table of Dog Bite Strict Liability Statutes

- Author: Rebecca F. Wisch and Diamond Conley
- Publish Year: 2022
- Place of Publication: Michigan State University College of Law
- Primary Citation: Animal Legal & Historical Center

Summary: Approximately 36 states have strict liability laws for dog bites. This table illustrates the primary components of each state's strict liability law such as animal covered, type of injury, place injury occurs, and exceptions under the law. The table does not discuss dangerous dog laws (although you can find a table of these laws under Legal Topics, Comparative Tables in the navigation bar).

IFAK (Individual First Aid Kit) Life Saver

Our most popular emergency medical course, this course is all about saving lives using field medicine, or 'dirt medicine', techniques. Carried by military personnel, law enforcement officers, outdoors enthusiasts, first responders and prepared citizens, the IFAK is a key element in providing life saving medical care to yourself or someone else. This isn't about splinting bones or putting on band-aids, this is about 'Stopping the Bleeding and Starting the Breathing.' The equipment in these kits continues to be effectively applied in emergency situations with increasing frequency across the nation by law-enforcement personnel and citizens alike. Don't be the one sitting on your hands in an emergency - learn how to be a life saver!

Version 1.0

The National Crime Victimization Survey (NCVS), administered by the US Census Bureau under the Department of Commerce, is a national survey of approximately 49,000^[1] to 150,000^[2] households - with approximately 240,000^[3] persons aged 12 or older - twice a year in the United States, on the frequency of crime victimization, as well as characteristics and consequences of victimization. The survey focuses on gathering information on the following crimes: assault, burglary, larceny, motor vehicle theft, rape, and robbery. The survey results are used for the purposes of building a crime index. It has been used in comparison with the Uniform Crime Reports and the National Incident-Based Reporting System to assess the dark figure of crime.^[4] The NCVS survey is comparable to the British Crime Survey conducted in the United Kingdom.

The NCVS began in 1972 and was developed from work done by the National Opinion Research Center and the President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice. A key finding of the survey was the realization that many crimes were not reported to the police.

The Uniform Crime Reporting (UCR) program compiles official data on crime in the United States, published by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI). UCR is "a nationwide, cooperative statistical effort of nearly 18,000 city, university and college, county, state, tribal, and federal law enforcement agencies voluntarily reporting data on crimes brought to their attention".^[1]

Crime statistics are compiled from UCR data and published annually by the FBI in the Crime in the United States series. The FBI does not collect the data itself. Rather, law enforcement agencies across the United States provide the data to the FBI, which then compiles the Reports.

The Uniform Crime Reporting program began in 1929, and since then has become an important source of crime information for law enforcement, policymakers, scholars, and the media.
